- A screenshot of a game board tutorial. The background is a light gray with a repeating pattern of white hexagons. At the top left, the title "Game Board Tutorial" is written in a white, pixelated font. In the top right corner, there is a dark gray button with the text "Tutorial Main Menu" in white. The center of the screen features a dark gray rectangular box with a thin white border. Inside this box, on the left, is a paragraph of white text: "The first step to creating your board is selecting board configuration." followed by "This will change the available board tiles that can be added. Use the board configuration button to change the board type. Available board types are hex and square." To the right of this text is a small cluster of seven white dots arranged in a hexagonal pattern, representing board tiles. At the bottom left of the screen, there is a dark gray button with the text "Tutorial Main Menu" in white, identical to the one in the top right.
